

It's less than a year away...

Are you ready for the end of Windows 7 support?

Most companies are far from finished with their upgrades to Windows 10. Many haven't started. Meanwhile, the clock is ticking down to January 14, 2020, when Windows 7 support ends. Upgrading can be risky. Not upgrading is riskier.

You need to act now

If you haven't yet begun to plan your upgrade from Windows 7, you need to ask yourself what you're waiting for. Large enterprises can take a year or more to plan and implement the move — and there is less than a year left until Microsoft ends support.

After that, Year 1 Extended Security Updates will be costly and could double in price each year if they're typical of past updates. Worse, unsupported software can pose unacceptable risks and costs — including exposure to malware — and limit the way you can respond to new threats and new opportunities.

If, like most companies, you have begun to upgrade from Windows 7, you may be finding the challenges of upgrading greater than you expected. Your IT pros may be unfamiliar with Windows' new, continuous update model and its impact on your management systems. Your business people may be wholly unprepared for the impact on their applications and the need for more regular application testing.

Make your Windows 10 upgrade a success with Avanade

There's no need for you to go it alone, especially when your implementation partner can be one of the world's most experienced providers of Microsoft technologies.

We understand the low-risk, low-cost delivery options for Windows 10 better than anyone else. With Avanade on your team, you cut the time, risk and cost of your upgrade, while increasing the ROI and security you gain from the software. And you realize more than a one-time advantage with Avanade because we can help you optimize your benefits throughout the evergreen cycle of Windows 10 feature releases.
